

'The woman's breasts belong to the woman'

- The woman's breasts are not sexual objects.
- The woman's breasts are not feeders for the young.

A woman's breasts belong to her

The breasts can be lovingly used sexually or they can be lovingly used to feed the young, but they must come back to the woman as they belong to the woman. It is important that this is understood. The breasts are attached to the woman and thus naturally belong to her as part of her body. By choice, what they do and or how they are used is one thing, but they must not belong to the form of usage, for that is where the confusion leads to the neglect and eventually the unconscious resentment.

The woman must be enriched by her own body parts. In this case, if a woman's breasts are not loved and adored as they are, in whatever shape or size they are, they can be neglected and or, they can become objects that are used for everyone else but herself.

Esoteric Breast Massage
~ for women by women

"We must free the woman to allow her to truly be in every way so that we can benefit from her living stillness and her natural nurturing ways"

The breasts naturally radiate a quality of DIVINE TRUTH that begins at the heart. The inner-heart in connection to the pubic bone centre, which then aligns to the ovaries, brings the emanation of nurturing out for all to have. Without this connection there is DIS-HARMONY and thus, the breasts receive the end result of the disharmony.

The breasts are an area of a woman's body that is not fully comprehended for what it truly is. Of course, we know that the breasts are for feeding the developing young, but what is not known is that they emanate, if and only if they are clear, the 'LIGHT OF NURTURING.' If the 'light of nurturing' is emanated, this natural and lost true way of being will be re-instated not only in and for the woman, but for all.

The breasts cannot emanate the 'light of nurturing' if the woman is not self-nurturing.

Unfortunately, and to our own demise, as a result of women having to resort to a more male driven energy to get through what is demanded of them to simply win back some form of equality in society, they have lost their inner-instincts to self-nurture – thus the lack of true self-nurturing that now prevails in our world. In energetic terms, it is not only the women that get directly affected by this ill-way of being, but we all do – as a result of the lack of this light impulsing and inspiring us to be more self-loving.

Lack of self-nurturing is now a significant global problem and in particular for women, as it is the energetic cause of breast cancer and its ill rise in our societies everywhere.

For a long time women have been accepting, or treating as normal, the fact that they get a few lumps in their breasts at every cycle or at some point in time. Some have them there all of the time. We are told/taught that these lumps are ok in some way and that because they are benign or just 'simple lumps', there needs to be no concern. Of course, this is true from a terminal illness point of view, but not so if energetic truth is sought. The fact that they are there demonstrates that something is not in harmony. If there is no harmony, there is no true light.

This is significant, for without our true light, not only do we suffer from our lesser way of being as a result of the disharmony, but so too does all else suffer from our lesser way of being with them.

Our breasts hold imposts – these come from how we feel about our breasts as in: 'I hate my breasts', 'they are too big', 'too small', 'I do not want to develop breasts as they attract the wrong sort of attention', etc. In effect any one thing you think ill about yourself as a woman affects your breasts and ovaries. Then there are the external imposts from men, for example men who use breasts as their measure of and for attraction. And then there are those from society, ie. 'you did not breastfeed for long enough', etc. These are but a few of the many imposts the breasts take on and thus carry.

This issue is bigger and wider than we have given thought to.

A woman needs to heal from a woman's understanding.

A series of Esoteric Breast Massages (EBM) can help clear the imposed ills that come from ourselves and from those whom we have allowed to impose on us.
